- Data model and system integration for the food sector

Danish Directorate for Food, Fisheries, and Agri Business

The client

The Danish Directorate for Food, Fisheries, and Agri Business (Direktoratet for Fødevare Erhverv or DFFE) administers EU regulations in Denmark on behalf of the EU and carries out some national regulation of the food sector.

The Directorate manages the complex regulation of subsidies according to agreements originally made in the WTO and it regulates a number of complex agriculture-related processes that span six or twelve months.

DFFE had about 200 paper forms and a back office system based on Oracle databases, as well as a number of special applications to assist its case workers.

The Danish agricultural sector had already taken up widespread use of online reporting in one compulsory area of regulation/ subsidies.

The challenges

The many paper-based forms imposed an unnecessary burden on those businesses that had already gotten used to online services.

Case management and processing of forms took an unnecessarily long time, due to data checking and validation as well as a frequent need to return to the reporting business for more data.

What Resultmaker did

- Developed the data model and the approximately 200 forms, using the same procedures described above under Virk.dk.
- Deployed a Broker based on the compulsory Oracle database to carry out the system integration.

Results delivered

Food businesses save time and aggravation by submitting applications and reports digitally.

Case workers save time by being able to process data directly in their back office systems.
